FALL 2026 / NMCA PRESIDENT'S REPORT

The Uncomfortable Lessons of Ego

DR. J.C. MOORE | NMCA PRESIDENT

I've been thinking quite a bit lately about ego and the subtle ways it influences our decisions. Like most people, I'd like to believe I'm thoughtful, reasonable, and open-minded. But I've had a few reminders recently that I'm not always as objective as I think I am. It's an uncomfortable realization, particularly because ego is so much easier to recognize in someone else than it is in ourselves.

When we think about ego, we often picture arrogance or someone who believes they know more than everyone around them. But I've come to appreciate that ego can manifest in almost the opposite way. Sometimes it appears as insecurity, comparison, or the need to prove ourselves. We can find ourselves questioning a decision we made for perfectly sound reasons simply because someone else took a different approach and appeared to succeed. Rather than objectively evaluating whether anything has changed, we begin wondering whether we've been too cautious, too conservative, or simply not good enough. Before long, our desire to achieve the best outcome becomes entangled with our desire to measure up.

That distinction has stayed with me because it challenges how I've traditionally thought about confidence and humility. We spend years developing our knowledge, skills, and judgment, and experience naturally brings confidence. But genuine confidence should give us the freedom to question ourselves without feeling threatened. It should also give us the discipline to stand by a carefully considered decision when the reasoning remains sound. The challenge is recognizing when we're responding to new information and when we're simply reacting to wounded pride.

The Stoics understood this struggle remarkably well. Marcus Aurelius, despite being one of the most powerful men in the world, spent much of his private writing reminding himself to remain humble, exercise good judgment, and recognize the limitations of his own perspective. He wrote, "If anyone can show me that I am wrong, I will gladly change. I seek the truth, which never harmed anyone." I find that sentiment particularly meaningful because it reminds us that our decisions should be guided by reason rather than pride. Sometimes that means changing our minds when presented with better information. Other times, it means having the discipline to remain confident in our judgment, even when someone else's success makes us uncomfortable.

I've recognized these tendencies in many areas of life. In business, we can become so invested in a particular strategy that we resist considering alternatives, or conversely, abandon a sound plan because someone else appears to be having greater success. In personal relationships, ego often shows up in the need to be right, even when being right does little to strengthen the relationship. It's remarkable how easily we can turn a simple disagreement into something personal, defending our position long after we've lost sight of what actually matters.

Leadership presents its own challenges. As president of the NMCA, I've had the opportunity to work with legislators, healthcare administrators, and fellow chiropractic physicians who don't always share my perspective. Much of our work involves advocating for changes we believe will strengthen chiropractic medicine in New Mexico. We invest considerable time and effort into developing proposals, building relationships, and explaining our positions. Naturally, we become attached to those efforts, but effective advocacy requires more than conviction. It requires the humility to listen, the patience to understand opposing perspectives, and the willingness to recognize when a different approach might better accomplish our goals.

That doesn't mean abandoning our principles or becoming less assertive in defending our profession. Quite the opposite. I believe our advocacy is strongest when we're confident enough in our purpose that we don't need to win every argument along the way. If our objective is improving patient access, advancing chiropractic medicine, and creating opportunities for future generations, then our personal pride should never become an obstacle to those goals.

One of the recurring themes in my reports over the past year has been the responsibility we share for the future of our profession. We've talked about gratitude, stewardship, the discipline required to sustain success, and the importance of remaining engaged. I've come to believe humility belongs in that same conversation. After all, taking responsibility for something also means being willing to examine our own shortcomings and acknowledge when our actions may be getting in the way of what we're trying to accomplish.

Perhaps that's what has stayed with me most from these recent reflections. I can't promise that my ego won't get the better of me again. In fact, I'm reasonably certain it will. But I hope I've become a little better at recognizing when it does, and a little more willing to ask myself whether I'm acting in service of the outcome or in defense of my own pride.

I'm optimistic about the future of chiropractic medicine in New Mexico, not because we have all the answers, but because we have talented, dedicated physicians who care deeply about the profession and the patients we serve. Our continued progress will require confidence, persistence, and the courage to challenge the status quo. But it will also require the humility to question ourselves, learn from one another, and recognize that no individual has a monopoly on good ideas.

The work of advancing our profession has never been about any one of us. It's about what we can accomplish together, and what we leave for those who follow. If we can approach that responsibility with both conviction and humility, I believe we'll be better physicians, better leaders, and better stewards of the profession entrusted to us.

Perhaps the greatest challenge isn't learning to set our egos aside once and for all, but developing the wisdom to recognize when they're standing in our way and the character to do something about it.

Dr. J.C. Moore

A note from your Executive Director,

Diana Statzula

As we watch the leaves turn across our beautiful New Mexico landscape, autumn reminds us that transition requires both balance and alignment. Just as nature adjusts to a new season, this profession continues to adapt and thrive in an everchanging healthcare environment.

The change in seasons is a perfect reflection of what you do as chiropractors. In nature, autumn is a period of shedding what is no longer needed to prepare for future growth. It serves as a reminder to evaluate foundations, realign professional goals, and ensure you are structurally supported for the months ahead.

The NMCA remains dedicated to providing you with the alignment you need – whether through continuing education, advocacy at the state level, or community support.

A perfect example of this dedication to growth was our recent seminar with Dr. Brandon Lundell. Dr. Lundell shared incredible clinical insights. The NMCA has more events to come. Please check them out below.

The NMCA Membership form is included in this issue along with the NMCA Convention information and registration. If you pay your membership in December, you will receive a 10% discount on the annual fee. Those of you paying monthly, your membership rolls in to the new year. If you are not an NMCA member, I encourage you to join now. We have a great group of Doctors who are ready to support and encourage you.

If you have any questions or would like more information about the NMCA, please call me at 505-280-0689.

ISTANBUL • KINESIO MEDICAL TAPING RESEARCH SYMPOSIUM

DR. PRIDHAM PRESENTING

SYMPOSIUM PRESENTATION

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

The 33rd Kinesio Medical Taping Research International Symposium was held in Istanbul, Türkiye in October. I had the opportunity to present my abstract KINESIO TAPING FOR KNEE CONTUSION IN A HIKER ON MOUNT KILIMANJARO: A CASE REPORT. The abstracts were all published in the Journal of Exercise Therapy and Rehabilitation. 2026;Sup (7)

I was able to represent information about chiropractic physicians in New Mexico, including our advanced practice certification.

The symposium was held at Atlas University, and that name made this chiropractor feel at home. It was attended by 248 participants, with 115 of them being physical therapy students. The excitement of the students and attendees was very encouraging.

The research discussions included advances in our understanding of the connections between skin, nerves, fascia and muscle.

RESEARCH AND IMPACT

The keynote speaker Can A. Yucesoy presented his Research on Muscular Mechanics within the context of Fascial Integrity and Its implications for Kinesio Taping®. His research used advanced MRI techniques to demonstrate activation of the muscles with elastic therapeutic taping as has been theorized over the last thirty years.

The data gathered is also helping a large consortium of biomedical engineering universities to make better prosthetics for patients who have lost limbs. It was very inspiring to see the theories of Dr. Kase helping to pave the way for better lives of people with disabilities.

I could not have imagined a better location for the symposium. Istanbul is where east meets west and the history behind the city leads to worlds coming together. It was beautiful to be a part of the experience.

ACA REPORT

by Michael Pridham, DC-APC

The world is waiting for the midterm elections to be over. Some cannot wait to hear who will win, and others never want to hear another word about the elections. Regardless of the outcome this Congress has one more chance to pass the Chiropractic Medicare Coverage Modernization Act. The concept is that there will likely be a large conglomeration of a bill that mends together the pieces of healthcare legislation that are bipartisan in the House. Our bill is one of the top few percent of bills with as many cosponsors, so we have a strong chance. We were in the same position in the previous session, so I will wait patiently to celebrate.

ACA Engage 2027 will be held at the Crystal Gateway Marriott on January 21-23rd. This hotel is one metro stop away from Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport. This event is where the leaders of the profession gather to advocate for you. It is always an incredibly inspiring time, and I am so fortunate to have spent time with so many members of our New Mexico Chiropractic Association family. Drs. Robert Jones, Bill Dogget, James Lehman, Stephen Perlstein, Blair Alexander, David Peer, Ryan Rowse, Cat Murtaugh (and countless others) are among the friends who I have been blessed to spend time with in Washington DC. I would love to see others join us in January! If you are unable to attend, please make sure your ACA membership is current, and contribute to the PAC so that you can help us make a difference.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT / FALL • WINTER

THE NMCA'S 80th YEAR

Looking backward and moving forward.

HERBERT M. BEATTY, DC, FICC

A REFLECTION ON OUR CHIROPRACTIC HERITAGE

I read recently that the average American in their 30's feels the only history that is relevant to their lives is what has occurred within their own lifetime. Taken to its conclusion this would mean that even perhaps their own parents and certainly their grandparents' lives are not relevant to their life as a 30+ year old, and therefore those that went before are somewhat irrelevant.

This writer respectfully disagrees. None of us arrive at our time of life independent of those that have gone before molding and shaping the future we presently live in. Historically such events as the fall of the Roman Empire in AD476, Magna Carta in 1015, the discovery of the Americas in 1492, the American Constitution ratified in 1788, the American Civil War decided in 1865, New Mexico Statehood in 1912, a women's right to vote passed in 1920, United Nations established in 1945, Civil rights legislation passed in 1964, the internet in the 1970's and the iPhone in 2007.

Each of the aforementioned events, culled out of history, has had a profound influence on the world and society that we live in today. The molding and shaping of our civilization have been affected by these events. How are these historical events relevant to our practice of chiropractic medicine today? In terms of the relevancy to each practicing chiropractic physician in New Mexico, our current ability to practice our profession stands on the shoulders historically of those chiropractors that went before, pioneering and establishing our right to provide chiropractic care for our patients today.

As I have written before, dentistry was licensed in New Mexico in 1918, chiropractors in 1921, medical doctors in 1923, and osteopaths not until 1935. Licensing legislation does not just happen. There were those early practitioners residing in New Mexico that became the catalyst for establishing a New Mexico Board of Chiropractic. The legislation, passed unanimously by a Republican legislature, was lobbied and spearheaded by Dr E.E. Thaxton, practicing in Raton NM at the time. Little is known about this NM chiropractic mover and shaker. He had a brother, Dr John Q. Thaxton, that followed Dr E.E. to Raton a few years later and became a significant political force in the state during his career. This writer will profile Dr John Thaxton in more detail in a subsequent article celebrating our 80th NMCA year.

The 1920 "New Mexico Business Directory" listed these chiropractors at the time:

Albuquerque: Drs Elizabeth F. Carman, and M.S. Enge

Artesia: Dr F.N. Thies

Las Vegas: Dr S.J. Brenner

Portales: Drs W.E. Bromley, A.T. Armstrong, C.A. Smith, T.J. and Ida Mae Keller

Raton: Dr E.E. Thaxton

Roswell: Drs Henderson and Jennie Bush

These early chiropractic pioneers are now unknown to us, and yet they are the pioneering foundational Doctors of Chiropractic we honor as we celebrate the later establishment, in 1947, of the New Mexico Chiropractic Association, celebrating 80 years of dedicated service to the profession and to the communities that we serve.

More to come, Enuf for now,
Herbert M Beatty DC FICC

On the Same Side of the Table

A chiropractor and a personal injury attorney on what good communication does for New Mexico patients

By Derek Atchley, D.C., Atchley Chiropractic, and Cameron Bush, Esq., Rosales & Bush Injury Law

Every chiropractor who treats personal injury patients knows the letter. After months of treatment and waiting for the case to resolve, a letter arrives from the patient's attorney requesting a one-third reduction in the outstanding bill. Sometimes, it's the first time the attorney has communicated with the chiropractor's office.

It's a familiar frustration, and frankly, we understand why.

This is the first installment of a quarterly series in which a New Mexico chiropractor and personal injury attorney trade notes from both sides of the auto case. Our idea is simple: when chiropractors and attorneys communicate well, the patient wins. When we don't, the insurance carrier does.

Pick Up the Phone

"Too often on the legal side, we seek to be understood instead of trying to understand," Cameron says. Most attorney–chiropractor communication happens in writing, where context gets lost and tone gets misread. Letters escalate, and increasingly, "we end up just having the chatbots argue with one another."

A five-minute call fixes that. Dr. Derek has seen the difference over more than 20 years in practice. "I can call Cameron anytime and have a really honest discussion about where the case is, what I think the patient needs, and whether I need to reel it in a little." The hardest cases, he notes, come from firms with whom he has no relationship or line of communication.

Know the Practice Before You Ask for 30%

"It's almost a standing joke in our office," Dr. Derek says of reduction letters. "We know the letter is coming." When it comes from a firm he has never spoken with, it usually gets marked up and sent right back.

On the Same Side of the Table

Cameron discovered that a reduction request only makes sense once you understand how the office bills. Thirty percent off at a clinic that inflates its PI charges may be modest. The same request to a practice that bills a car-crash patient exactly what it bills a cash-paying patient is a substantial ask.

He admits he once ignorantly assumed every provider inflated their bills. What changed his mind was a chiropractor explaining his billing rates, and educating him on the Croft and Mercy guidelines, and the high cost of specialized equipment like decompression tables and hyperbaric chambers.

The two have since turned reduction letters into a friendly ritual. Dr. Derek writes on every request, even when he agrees to the number, just for laughs and because he knows it bothers Cameron. Underneath the joke is trust. "If Cameron calls and says, 'This is really what I have to work with,' I know he's telling me the truth," Dr. Derek says, "and I'm a lot more willing to work with him."

Value the Care Like You Value the Fee

Cameron's sharpest advice is aimed at his own profession. "[Lawyers] value our fee, and our work is certainly worth what we charge. But we don't apply that same value to the care medical providers are giving." Without the treatment, the patient may not have recovered, and without the records, the attorney may not have been able to prove the claim.

"If I'm asking [a chiropractor] for a discount, I should be giving a discount," he says. Attorneys willing to reduce their own fees often find providers more willing to meet them halfway.

Who Loses When We Fight

The cost of broken relationships falls hardest on patients in rural communities where a single chiropractor may be the only option for miles. Some of these providers, burned too many times by large billboard firms, now refuse personal injury cases outright and the patients have no one to treat them.

"That firm may have won its one little dispute," Cameron says, "but it hurt patients' ability to get care. The one benefiting isn't the chiropractor or the attorney. It's the insurance carrier."

Dr. Derek emphasizes the importance of relationships with local attorneys. "When you start developing lifelong relationships with those people," he says, "you realize you're on the same team, not opposing sides."

The Bottom Line

Both professions have their mills: the firms cranking out cases and the clinics running up the bill as fast as they can. Neither of us are defending them. But New Mexico has plenty of honest providers and good attorneys who do meaningful work for their communities. Our goal is the same: add value to our communities and be good human beings.

Next quarter, we'll pick up where this conversation left off. Have a question you'd like a chiropractor and an attorney to take on together? Send it to Atchleychiropractic@gmail.com

Job Opportunities

Yuma is continually growing, but still maintains that “small-town” feel. We’re centrally located approx. 2 ½ hours between Phoenix and San Diego, which allows for those quick getaways without the hassle of airports. It’s a wonderful place to raise a family and the cost of living is significantly less expensive than surrounding areas. We have a strong patient base which includes, but is not limited to; active retirees, outdoor enthusiasts, veterans, and young professionals to name a few.

Even after our 40+ years of delivering excellent chiropractic care to the Yuma community, we continue to be a growing, patient-focused health & spine clinic dedicated to providing the highest standard of care, promoting natural wellness, and helping our patients achieve long term pain relief and an improved quality of life. We have a very strong, well-trained, experienced support staff with an outstanding office manager that handles it all. We take care of all the business aspects of the office which allows you to focus only on patient care.

Your key responsibilities will include:

- Conducting thorough exams, evaluations, & patient consultations
- Creating personalized treatment programs for the patients
- Educating the patients on the benefits of chiropractic care
- Maintaining accurate, up-to-date patient records and treatment notes

Qualifications:

- D.C. degree from accredited chiropractic college
- Active and valid Arizona chiropractic license
- Passing scores for NBCE parts 1-4
- Strong interpersonal skills and a deep commitment to patient care

Starting salary is $90,000-$100,000/yr. D.O.E., plus generous performance bonuses and 3 weeks/yr. paid vacation. We also pay your malpractice insurance and we have relocation expense options available.

If you’re passionate about chiropractic and dedicated to teaching people about the benefits of chiro care...you may be just who we are looking for! If you’re looking for a great work environment, exceptional support staff, and a terrific place to live... we may be just who you are looking for! Let’s talk!!! Please send your resume with cover letter outlining our long-term career goals to s.morris777@yahoo.com

ASSOCIATE WANTED

Precure Chiropractic is a multi-location, values-driven practice serving southern New Mexico with clinics in Alamogordo and Las Cruces. We are known for our ICARE culture—Intentionality, Commitment, Accountability, Remarkable Service, and Excellence—and for developing confident, capable doctors who thrive in both clinical skill and professional growth.

We are seeking a full-time Associate Chiropractor who wants more than just a job. This is an opportunity to join a clinic that invests deeply in its doctors, provides structured mentorship, and offers a long-term professional home with real upward mobility.

Why Precure Chiropractic Stands Out

Our practice is built on a foundation of professionalism, mentorship, and patient-centered care. Doctors who join our team experience:

A structured, supportive mentorship program

Weekly doctor development meetings, adjusting refinement, case management coaching, communication training, and real-world practice readiness.

A strong, stable patient base

We serve a regional population of nearly 100,000 with high demand and low provider saturation. New associates step into a full schedule quickly.

A values-driven culture

Our ICARE values aren't slogans—they guide hiring, training, communication, and patient experience. Doctors who thrive here are intentional, coachable, and committed to excellence.

A long-term professional home

We are growing, and we invest in doctors who want stability, leadership opportunities, and a career path—not a temporary position.

The Lifestyle: Southern New Mexico's Hidden Advantage

Our region offers a lifestyle that many chiropractors don't realize they can have early in their careers:

Ruidoso Mountain Paradise

Just a short drive away—pine forests, mountain lakes, skiing at Ski Apache, festivals, breweries, and four-season outdoor living.

White Sands National Park

Minutes from our Alamogordo clinic—sunsets, hiking, photography, and one of the most unique landscapes in the world.

Affordable cost of living

Live comfortably, build financial stability, and enjoy a quality of life that's hard to match in larger cities.

Safe, friendly communities

Ideal for young professionals, families, and anyone who values space, sunshine, and outdoor recreation.

Who We're Looking For

We welcome:

New graduates
Board-eligible doctors
Experienced chiropractors seeking a supportive, stable environment
Doctors who want mentorship and professional development
Career-minded individuals who want to grow with a practice
If you value communication, professionalism, teamwork, and excellence, you will thrive here.

Compensation & Benefits

We offer competitive compensation with growth potential, along with:

Structured onboarding
Weekly mentorship
Supportive team environment
Leadership opportunities for long-term doctors
A practice culture built on respect, accountability, and service

(Full compensation details can be provided upon request.)

Front Desk Admin

Job Description: Front Desk Administrator for Functional You LLC, Functional Medicine and Chiropractic Office

Job Title: Front Desk Administrator
Location: Albuquerque, New Mexico
Position Type: Part-time (24 hours (solid schedule) more hours available depending on need). Starting pay: $15 and up (Bonuses and yearly raises given), retirement plan available.

About Us

Functional You LLC is a dynamic and integrative healthcare practice specializing in Functional Medicine and Chiropractic care. Our mission is to help patients achieve optimal health through personalized, holistic care. We are looking for a friendly, detail-oriented Front Desk Administrator to join our team and be the welcoming face of our practice.

Job Responsibilities

Front Desk Duties

Warmly greet patients and visitors, creating a welcoming environment for all.
Answer phone calls, emails, and patient inquiries with professionalism and empathy.
Schedule patient appointments using Jane electronic health record system.
Check patients in and out, using basic math skills, collect payments, process billing, and provide detailed receipts. This is currently done through QuickBooks. Having prior knowledge of QuickBooks is beneficial, but not necessary as training will be provided.
Ensure patient records are organized, updated, accurate, and confidential, including intake forms and lab requisitions.
HIPPA certification is required for working with patient files (this certification will be paid for through Functional You LLC if job application is approved)

Administrative Support

Maintain the cleanliness and organization of the front desk, reception, and waiting areas. This also includes watering plants, filling the water filter, and the occasional sweeping and mopping of the office.
Manage supplement inventory, office supplies, and wellness products.
Handle patient paperwork, including Functional Medicine new patient paperwork, lab reports, and Chiropractic new patient paperwork.
Coordinate Functional Medicine lab tests, track results, and follow up with patients.
Prepare and organize files for daily patient schedules, including pre-appointment and post-appointment checklists.

Patient Interaction

Provide patients with information about clinic services and prices, treatment plans, and lab test prices.
Briefly educate patients on Functional Medicine and Chiropractic care benefits.
Assist patients with an understanding that insurance is not covered (we don't take insurance and are cash only) and cash payment options.

Handle patient questions and concerns with empathy, directing complex issues to the appropriate team member which would be Dr. Seat.

Team Collaboration

Work closely with Dr. Seat to help provide smooth clinic operations.

Participate in team meetings to discuss patient care, workflow improvements, and clinic updates.

Contribute to creating a positive, patient-focused workplace culture.

Qualifications

Strong organizational skills and attention to detail.

Previous experience in a healthcare office, wellness office, or customer service role (preferred).

Excellent communication and interpersonal skills.

High school diploma or equivalent (required).

Ability to multitask and thrive in a fast-paced environment.

An ability to answer the phone with confidence and to make calls to patients and future patients.

Proficiency with scheduling and electronic health record (EHR) systems (experience with Jane (this is my EHR system) is a plus). Training for this will also be provided.

Knowledge of Functional Medicine, Chiropractic care, and supplements is a significant advantage but not required. This training will also be provided on a daily basis.

Key Attributes

Warm, friendly, and professional demeanor.

Passion for health and wellness.

Dependable, punctual, and a team player.

Ability to always maintain confidentiality and professionalism.

Benefits

Competitive hourly wage ($15/hour starting, with chances of increased pay based off experience and job performance).

Paid time off (sick leave)

Flexible work hours

Employee wellness options (discounts on labs and supplements, and other health resources)

Company-sponsored team events (lunches)

Career advancement opportunities within a growing organization.

Supportive and collaborative work environment.

PRACTICE FOR SALE

I'm now in my 42nd year of practice in the small town of Bloomfield, NM, which is close to the Four Corners Region, close to Farmington, NM. I'm now semi-retired working 3 days per week, but I'm looking to fully retire.

My office has roughly 1000 square feet, and it has always been a very small practice. Nearly 30 years ago I was a certified chiropractic neurologist, dealing mostly with auto-accident cases.

I work alone without office help, and I don't use electronic health records; I still use paper files. I have a well-maintained 40-year-plus Fischer X-ray unit, and I had a new cathode ray tube installed into it in 2007. The X-ray machine is not digital, but a digital unit could easily be attached to it.

I pride myself in fixing up my patients as quickly as possible, mainly through the application of Chiropractic Spinal and Extremity Manipulation. I also frequently use Cox Flexion-Distraction Manipulation to reduce spinal disc protrusions, lumbar facet syndromes, spondylolisthesis subluxations, and to increase intradiscal spacing and mobility throughout patients' spines. I occasionally use soft tissue techniques, such as Transverse Frictional Massage and Therapeutic Massage. Occasionally I also use Electrical Stimulation.

The biggest advantage I have to offer in someone taking over my practice is high name recognition in this small town of Bloomfield. In some cases, I am now treating the grandchildren of my first patients. I am willing to work alongside a new chiropractic physician for several months to ease the transition.

My asking price is $5,000.00 or best offer.

PRACTICE FOR SALE

Dear Colleagues,

After more than forty years of dedicated service in chiropractic care, the time has come for me to retire.

I am looking for someone who may be interested in taking over my practice, serving the Los Alamos, Espanola, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, and surrounding communities.

It has been an honor to serve my patients, whom I consider part of my family, and to help them regain control of their lives through improved health. My approach to care is slightly unusual but has always been holistic and integrative. Over the years, I have combined various techniques into my signature protocol:

* Motion Palpation
* Applied Kinesiology
* Trigger Point Therapy
* Acupower
* Touch for Health Muscle Balancing
* Arthrostim for Adjusting the Spine and Peripheral Joints
* Total Body Modification
* My own specialized method for deepening communication with the body
* Erchonia Cold Laser Therapy
* Nutritional Guidance

My primary philosophy is that the body inherently knows what it needs to restore balance and adapt to its environment.

By identifying and releasing " triggers "— areas where energy is unnecessarily expended — I help patients regain the stability and control essential for optimal health. While I originally studied traditional chiropractic, I have since additionally incorporated the above techniques into my practice to offer my patients more complete solutions when these " triggers " are found.

As I prepare to pass on the care of my patients, I am seeking a committed practitioner who shares my passion for holistic health and is eager to continue this work. If you are interested in learning what I do and taking over a very busy practice, please contact me so we can discuss this opportunity further.

Thank you for your support and trust over these many years. I look forward to ensuring a smooth transition that honors the legacy of our work in this field.

Sincerely,

Gary L. Storkan, D.C.

SERVICES

Services

Hello and welcome to Greenfield Processor Service LLC. I have been cleaning and maintaining film processors since 1990. I started in Colorado and went to 5 Kodak schools and got certified. In 2001 I moved to Albuquerque and started working on processors here. I then started my own company in 2003, cleaning, installing, maintaining processors and providing fixer, developer and x-ray film ever since. A few other companies have come and gone but I am still here. I have no plans to retire anytime soon. If your told you have to go to Digital, that is not true, I will still be here cleaning and maintaining processors. I will continue to support the NMCA seminar each year as I am the only one that does for many many years. Feel free to come by my station and ask questions at the seminar this year. I also collect used x-ray film if you have that need. I know of 2 other x-ray companies that come to Albuquerque to service my customers x-ray units, so you have other choices. Feel free to contact me for their information. If you have supplies that I don't stock, no worries, I am sure I can get those for you as well. I have in stock, x-ray film, fixer, developer and silver recovery units. I am happy to get you quotes on supplies and will NEVER EVER make you sign a contract. I currently travel to Alamogordo and Artesia, traveling through Roswell. I am willing to go to other cities if needed, feel free to give me a call and see what we can work out. I have never lost a customer because of anger, it has always been because of covid, retirement, digital or they passed away. I look forward to talking to you so please send me a text first so I can add you to my phone, then I will be happy to call you as soon as possible. My number is 505-507-4659, Thank you so much, John.
